

Constitution is king

The Beacon Journal's editorial cartoonist really got it wrong with his Aug. 21 depiction of U.S. District Judge Anna Diggs Taylor saying, "The president isn't king. I am."

Apparently, Chip Bok doesn't realize that no one person in America is king, not even the thoughtful judge who made her important decision. Someone might want to tell him that America's king is the rule of law, as outlined by our excellent Constitution. Thankfully, Taylor understands that, even if Bok is more interested in making controversy than in making sense.
