

How dare he

How dare the president appoint Richard Cordray as the director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau during the three minutes the Republicans let their guard down.

Doesn't Obama understand that we have nothing to fear because all the financial corporations that caused the world's economies to melt down a few years back can be counted on to take good care of us?

After all, they have been pampered by a trillion dollars' worth of taxpayer bailout money. So they must be in good spirits.
